Bold Leaves Hooded Coat

Nicky Epstein's hooded coat celebrates nature with a pattern of colorful leaves worked in Naturally's Tussock Chunky 14 Ply.

Knit & Style 2002-10

A Celebration of Nature

•By Nicky Epstein

Knitting leaves is a charming, creative way to celebrate nature. I am not alone in using nature's leaves as inspiration. They have been used in every aspect of design, whether it be garments, tiles, rugs, china, etc. The next time you are in a museum, note how many pieces include some leaves.

The following leaves were inspired by real leaves that I gathered in my travels, although I took poetic license with some of their names. The leaves are made easily and quickly by using increases, decreases and yarn overs. They give any garment you apply them to an artful look that always captures admiring attention. The following leaves are just a few of my favorites to inspire you to also celebrate nature by knitting them.

2 sts = 1 in. with Skacel Collection, Inc., PELLIGO in garter st. Exact gauge is not important.

TO SAVE TIME, TAKE TIME TO CHECK GAUGE.

NOTES: Fringe:

Cut fringe pieces first. Fringe is formed by cutting pieces of PELLIGO twice as long as desired fringe length plus 1 in. (for knot) and knotting it to edge of Stole – each cut length of PELLIGO forming two pieces of fringe. Vary the length and number of fringes as desired.

Samples were made with twelve 8 in. fringes on each edge for small Stole, and twenty 6 in. fringes on each edge for large Stole. If you wish to follow these specifications, cut twelve 17 in. pieces of PELLIGO for the small and twenty 13 in. pieces for the large; otherwise, cut the lengths and number of pieces as desired.

STOLE: With size 19 nbs and PELLIGO

CO 10 (15) sts, leaving a tail at CO edge, about the desired length of fringe. Work in garter st until all yarn is used, leaving enough to BO and leave a tail as long as desired length of fringe. BO all sts loosely. Pull tail through and secure.

FINISHING: Block Stole by stretching in both directions to about 5 in. x 38 in. (8 in. x 33 in.) and place under damp cloth overnight. Blow dry with hair dryer. Attach fringe evenly along each edge of Stole. Double each cut piece and attach it by inserting crochet hook into edge of Stole and pulling folded end through, forming a loop. Wrap cut ends of piece around crochet hook and pull through loop. Pull each strand tightly and secure with a drop of Fray Check®. Trim tails of CO and BO edges to match length of fringe, if necessary. Cleaning: Use professional fur cleaner or a home dry cleaning product such as Dryer!®.

Meet New Zealand's Designing Women

•by Cheryl Potter

Lynda Goulden — Whangarei

We meet fiber artist Lynda Goulden at a seaside café in Manganui in the North Island of New Zealand. This little hamlet is on Doubtless Bay, described by Captain Cooke who discovered it as, "Doubtless a Bay."

Lynda wears many hats, as we soon discover. Today, she is posing as a yarn rep, selling possum yarn in the far north of North Island. Since her market is small and her territory spread out (she covers the south island too), Lynda sells to a variety of venues, including yarn stores, tourist shops, designers and machine knitters. The back of her car reads "Possum Distributor," with the depiction of a possum on the side. "You can imagine how many people ask me about that," Lynda jokes.

Because her first affinity is for machine knits, Lynda prefers the thinner woolen spun possum blended with merino and silk. In New Zealand, hand knitters also prefer yarns that are thin by American standards, she points out, and much of what she sells to stores is worsted spun DK weight yarn.

Later, we travel a few hours south to Lynda's home and design studio, which is in Whangarei, overlooking the Kamo Valley. After perusing some of her hand knit designs, I coax Lynda into showing me a selection of her award-winning machine knit wearable art. Her newest original, the Crop Jacket, is slated for a slew of 2002 competitions. In this contemporary design, she uses a knit-weave technique to incorporate possum boucle with bands of a fingering weight merino/possum blend for stylish results.

I am also treated to a first hand look at the intricate detailing of the Dove Jacket, a fairisle garment knitted from various yarns in Lynda's stash. "It's a large personal stash," she admits. Like everything else, the jacket recently won a prize; this one for machine knit fairisle.

Crop Jacket

Dove Jacket

Knitter's Society in 2000. In addition to this national prize, the America's Cup piece won four other awards as well. Looking upon this quilt, as nice as any wall art I have seen in this country, it strikes me again that there is more to this unpretentious fiber artist than meets the eye. [Susan Lazear's column, Computers Don't Byte, appears in each issue of Knit 'N Style.]

I want to know more, but it is difficult to coax information from the unassuming Lynda. Finally, over dinner and a bottle of wine, I persuade her to reveal her story, which begins far from her beautiful stone house overlooking the valley, and is not without its share of hardship.

shearing and everyday farming activities. She recalls that her first encounter with a knitting machine was at the tender age of three. "While my mother taught herself to knit, my elder brother and I spent many happy hours playing at her feet," Lynda remembers. "We would search the floor in a vain attempt to locate her dropped stitches."

As the two eldest children, both Lynda and her brother were encouraged to knit from an early age. By the time she was ten, Lynda was able to hand knit complicated jerseys for the entire family.

As Lynda entered her teens, her father died unexpectedly, which forced the family to leave the farm and move to the city. Lynda was deeply traumatized. "A great many years were to pass before I was to pick up a set of knitting needles again," she says quietly. "Even more years were to elapse before it dawned on me that knitting and design work would play a major therapeutic role in the reawakening of my self-confidence."

Throughout the hard times, Lynda's mother continued to machine knit and design and it was from her that Lynda finally found the encouragement to begin again. "My mother presented me with my first 'rusty' knitting machine and invited me along to a local knitting club," Lynda recalls. Before long, Lynda was demonstrating self-taught techniques at meetings and teaching classes. She acquired a new machine, which allowed her to further her skills.

Then Lynda became active in the Northland Area group where knitters from all over the upper north met to share their ideas and techniques. For years, she served as the Area Editor, Delegate and Counselor, whose job it was to report back to the National Body of the New Zealand Machine Knitters Society (NZMKS). As her confidence grew, she attended the Annual National Festivals and entered the competitions.

Soon she found herself teaching at Northland Polytechnic, where her textile students taught her just as much about the fashion industry as she taught them about knit and design. At that time computer design knit programs were becoming popular and Lynda bought one of the first available in New Zealand. Alone, she began to teach herself computer design skills. "I made some awful mistakes along the way," she laughs.

However, her efforts began to pay off with higher and higher placing in the NZMKS competitions. In both 1999 and 2000, she won the Susan Lazear Trophy for Original computer designed knitwear. To her delight, the prizes included software packages for Susan's Cochinnelle programs. "This was marvelous news," Lynda recalls. "The addition of her programs gave me the ability to quickly and easily extend my design capabilities even further."

As Lynda entered her teens, her father died unexpectedly, which forced the

One day, while researching designs for a local Alpaca breeder, Lynda stumbled across an Internet article about a new Possum yarn. "It was just beginning to be used in the New Zealand knitwear industry, and the hope was that it would catch on," Lynda explains.

Bustrail Possums were introduced from Australia into New Zealand in the 1800's in a foiled attempt to start a fur industry. Since then their numbers have increased to epidemic proportions. "They are literally eating our forests to death," Lynda explains, noting that every effort is currently being made by the New Zealand government to eradicate these noxious pests. New Zealand has the dubious honor of being the only country in the world with enough raw fiber to produce yarn.

Intrigued, Lynda met with a possum yarn producer, and from the outset she realized that she had stumbled onto something special. Blended with Merino wool, Possum yarn had properties unlike any she had ever encountered. Because of the yarn's hollow core fiber, Lynda found that exceptional warmth was possible from the most lightweight of plys, making it ideal for machine knitting. Combined with its fast drying abilities, silky handle and drape, it was possible that possum fiber might one day rival cashmere, Lynda guessed. "I could see that it had huge potential in the fashion industry and I was hooked," she confesses.

In 2000, Lynda began distributing possum yarn throughout New Zealand. Establishing the business took up so much of her time and energy, that she had to set her personal work aside for a year. Having found success in the yarn arena as well, Lynda is now ready to return to the world of knit and design. "I have witnessed a huge increase in product sales of possum yarns," she reports. "There are now daily queries coming from all corners of the globe as interest in this yarn spreads."

As she returns to the design work she so loves, a new aim is to feature possum yarn as a key element. "I would also love a chance to regain the Susan Lozeor Trophy," she says with a smile. For the present, Lynda sells her original design garments, both hand and machine knit. From time to time, she can be persuaded to write patterns, so that others may enjoy her garments. She would like to offer the hand knit pattern for her Possum Poncho to Knit N Style readers, and also hopes to one day meet Susan Lozeor in person. Her future aspirations include opening a retail shop that specializes in a line of finished goods inspired by her designs.

Anna Gratton's Little Wool Company — Feilding

We find fiber artist Anna Gratton of her farm in Feilding on the North Island of New Zealand. The house dates from 1895 and when she and her husband Colin moved here 25 years ago, it was in shambles. Today, the place is restored to its original grandeur with a circular drive, flower gardens, and a courtyard with a fountain outside her studio and mill showroom.

The Grattons raise Corriedales and have about 400 scattered along the hillsides at any given time. This forms the backbone fiber of their yarns, and Anna shows us how the fleeces are skirted and the fibers sorted for scouring. In addition to yarns, Anna produces top and also finished garments, both hand and machine knit, of her own design.

Because Anna and Colin own the last surviving family farm mill in New Zealand, we do not often think of Anna as a fiber artist. Yet her yarns, patterns, and signature design garments knit from hand dyed yarns are sold all over New Zealand, Australia, Asia and now some of them are trickling into the United States.

Every time a mill closes, mechanical engineer Colin acquires yet more machinery that Anna needs to produce her fancy yarns. Along the way, they have also acquired top yarn designer Peter O'Sullivan, who has designed fiber for all of the big companies that have gone under in the past 15 years. "I never quit a job," Peter says ruefully.

Now at Little Wool Company, "we are totally vertical!" says Anno, who has the capacity to do everything from sheep to shop. For Anno is no stronger to yarn. Her grandmother taught her to knit when she was five and she has knit handspun and dyed garments all her life. When she left University she worked for the New Zealand Arts Council helping to fund grants to artists, a lot of which were fiber artists. Over the years, her hobby grew into a business.

Anno does the marketing for Little Wool Company as well. She shows of ten trade shows a year, helps organize an annual show with Creative Fiber and has been a board member on the New Zealand Textile Institute Committee, which co-ordinates all textile and leather making in NZ.

She has always sold finished garments to the tourist trade, but it wasn't until she hand dyed the fiber herself that the garments took off. Now approximately 1600 merino shawls and scarves leave Anna's studio each month. These are designed to be super lightweight for a variety of climates.

Anna designs the original patterns for garments, then develops the yarn and sends it out to contract knitters. Currently, she has approximately 20 machine knit styles that are sold as finished garments and nearly 30 hand knits that are available as finished garments or kits, with new designs being introduced each season.

Anno's last trip to the United States was in 1992 and this year she hopes to return to TNNA for the first time in 10 years. Look for her designs and yarns in the coming year in magazines, at trade shows and at your local yarn shop. NS

With the magnificent and beautiful Capitol behind us and the spectacular Washington monument standing strong and proudly in front of us, the

Washington, D.C. Knit Out and Crochet, sponsored by the Craft Yarn Council of America, was a most impressive day in one's life. It was a few weeks after September 11, and being outside, under the sky where you may never look at an airplane the same way, we gathered on the grasses of the National Mall with other friendly, safe, creative, full of life, knitters and crocheters. It was a symbolic and memorable day. In the open air, with our multifaceted family of friends of all races, religions, ages, and skill levels, we shared a pleasant commonality together through knitting and crocheting.

I'm talking about a remarkable event that could possibly be happening in your area. An event like this one should- n't be missed. It promises to warm the hearts of present knitters and possibly ignite the fire of a new knitter. This year's events of Knit Out and Crochet are a nationwide effort happening in about thirty locations around the country. Celebrating the craft in front of the public eye makes the 38 million of us show off what we enjoy in a big way. Here you can visit sizable displays exhibiting the craft and art of knitting and crocheting. Not only will knitters be drawn by events, but the general public walking by will find themselves attracted to the wonders, comforts and benefits of knitting. This is a meeting of the experienced ready to share their skills with the inexperienced hoping to learn.

Here's what you will find at one of these events. See displays set up by area guilds that would welcome your attendance to their gatherings. Give them your name and find out when they meet. Meet your local retailers and meet some of the yarn and magazine companies that support them all. Although no selling will happen at this event, visiting various tables of displays, meeting other friendly and creative knitters of all levels will, no doubt, begin, rekindle, or increase your enthusiasm. Each Knit Out and Crochet will have fashion shows. In the Washington, D.C. location where I had the pleasure of being on emcee, we had a wonderful fashion show under a huge tent attended by quite a crowd. This fashion show consisted of many accomplishments by various knitters of all levels. There were garments that were knit by the knitting guild members as well as the actual garments that appeared in some of the leading knitting magazines. Join me and Nancy Thomas of Lion Brand yarns for four fashion shows scheduled.

You never know who might show up at one of these things. Last year, Kaffe Fassett, well known author and designer of at least 12 books attended (and look at that star struck lady touching his knee in her sheer excitement of sitting next to all that talent!) Kaffe spent some time talking to the attendees about his approach to color knitting and then spent an hour meeting with Knit Out visitors, signing books and answering questions. The exciting and outrageous Lily Chin has appeared in the

Kaffe Fassett

Knit Out in New York along with the beautiful and elegant Melissa Leppman. Trendsetter Yarns owner Barry Klein, well known news commentators and other celebrities have attended Knit Out.

One of the important purposes of this event is to teach non-knitters how to knit. We were amazed by the amount of enthusiastic teens in the crowd. Pictured is one of the "teaching tents" offering free lessons to newbies. The most important job in the world is teaching. What an honor to give a young person a skill that will last a lifetime so he or she can channel the urge to create and the need for warmth from a handmade sweater that come from his hands. This four hour, family oriented Knit Out and Crochet is an event that you must find time to attend. We need you, so join us with the goals of building awareness, showing your talent (even share your mistakes) creating excitement, and most importantly, sharing the fun. Are you part of a knit or crochet guild, club or church group? This event is a fun project to participate in. You can become mentors to new knitters and crocheters. It's a terrific way to build awareness for your guild or club. But what if there isn't one in your area? You can do one yourself.

Warmup America Afghan

Q: How can my guild or local yarn shop stage a Knit Out and Crochet event?

A: Select a high-traffic area in your town or city. Consider a public park if you want it outside. If an indoor location is desired, try searching for cultural centers, malls, recreation centers, etc. Keep in mind it should be a central location accessible to many people. It must be a space that is there anyway (like in a mall) and they become attracted when they didn't expect it.

Q: How large of a space will we need?

A: Consider how many volunteers and attendees will be involved and then figure the amount of space they can "cover" comfortably. Having more space for people to sit around and knit and crochet is always preferable.

Q: What will we need?

A: Make sure you have supplies like yarn, needles, hooks and lots of friendly volunteers. Consider the fact that tables and chairs are the most important big items that you will need for the Knit Out and Crochet event, so that people can watch demonstrations, the fashion show, and comfortably learn to knit or crochet, etc. Have all volunteers wearing special identifiable T-shirts. A nice boom box with funky music for the fashion show will add excitement. I'll bet you know a teen somewhere that can offer some assistance with his or her CD collection and budding DJ aspirations. You'll need easels for signs indicating the activities going on at each tent or station, and depending on the location, a portable microphone may be required. Platforms or risers also may be necessary for fashion shows and show and tell presentations. Check with the facility you are considering and ask about the availability of these items. They may loan them to you for the event.

Q: Will we need permits and insurance?

A: Many cities, especially if you work with parks and recreation departments, require permits or insurance for special events so it is important to ask about these things.

Q: What kind of a location would be required?

A: Estimate how many people you think you will attract. A site easily accessible by public transportation and by car is the perfect setting. Remember to inquire about parking and parking costs because the event may draw from surrounding areas. Toilet facilities must be convenient and food concessions close by and affordable.

Q: How should the event be scheduled? What will we do there?

A: Teach hitting or crachet, organize a fashion show! Have volunteers make a group project that you can auction off, sending proceeds to a charity. Have teachers demonstrate something interesting. Have a show and tell. Try some comedy — bring funny mistakes: too long sleeves, the third sock "pair", the hat that turned into the tube top, (Actress Hilary Swank's mistake she told on David Letterman) the great looking sweater with the too small, 3 inch neck hole, etc.

Q: How can I let the public know this is happening?

A: Send a press release to your local newspapers about your group's involvement, noting the location and time of your event. Contact local television stations well in advance to let them know to bring their cameras. Make sure all of the shops in the area are aware and encourage their involvement. Smart ones will know this is great for business and they might want to set up an incredible display representing their shop. They can hand out their class lists if they have one make new potential customer contacts. Contact colleges, schools, girl scouts, libraries, book stores. Make up a nice looking flyer that can be posted at the event site or on public bulletin boards of various businesses.

The results — you know what it's like when you are knitting or crocheting in public and people start talking to you and admiring what you are doing.

That's what this beautiful event is all about. Now go have fun with the best of humanity! So much of the information in this article came from the website. GAUGE

8 sts = 4 in.; 3 1/4 rows = 1 in. with yarn doubled (except for Splosh) in garter st. TO SAVE TIME, TAKE TIME TO CHECK GAUGE.

NOTES

The gauge will vary slightly depending on which pairs of yarns you are holding. The gauge is not crucial for this Shawl as variations in the size won't matter. If making the Shawl for a tall person you may wish to add a few more stitches to make it longer at the center back.

The Shawl is knit in pairs of yarns except for Splosh, which is knit alone. Read notes below for tips on changing yarns/colors. Change yarns/colors every 4-6 rows. You may want to do a few narrow stripes of 2 rows, or a few wide stripes that are 8 rows.

Tips on changing yarns/colors:

When changing yarns, knot new yarns and leave a tail of at least 8-10 in. of old and new yarns to form fringe. The pictured Shawl has shorter ends at the beginning and end of Shawl and longer fringe at bottom and lower sides. You will knot in more fringe when Shawl is completed to fill in blank areas.

Pay attention to how much yarn you are using and try to spread out the use so that you will have yarn for both sides of the Shawl, keeping aside 8-10 yards to add in as fringe. You may wish to wind off 8-10 yards of each yarn before you start knitting to be sure to have a full variety for fringe at the end.

You will be knitting with pairs of yarns (except Splosh which is worked alone) such as: DECO-RIBBON + COTTON CHENILLE, FIZZ + COTTON CHENILLE, FIZZ + DECO-RIBBON, DECO-RIBBON + WAIKIKI, MERINO FRAPPE + WAIKIKI, COTTON CHENILLE + WAIKIKI, MERINO FRAPPE + COTTON CHENILLE, MERINO FRAPPE + FIZZ, FIZZ + WAIKIKI. When changing colors you will have a more blended color change if you only change one of the yarns in a pair at a time. Thus if you are knitting with DECO-RIBBON and FIZZ, when you make a change you might keep FIZZ and add in COTTON CHENILLE in color Raspberry. Then on the next color change keep the COTTON CHENILLE color Raspberry and drop the FIZZ and add in WAIKIKI.

SHAWL: Inc side of Shawl: Holding a pair of yarns (except Splosh) tog, CO 2 sts. Work entire Shawl in garter st (knit every row), inc 1 st at every odd row edge (see diagram) until you have 64 sts on ndl. Note: All incs and yarn/color changes take place on one side of the Shawl so that one edge tapers down and the other side stays straight. Cont even on 64 sts for 14 rows to make center back of Shawl. Dec side of Shawl: Reverse the method of inc to finish other side of Shawl. Dec 1 st at st each beg edge along bottom of Shawl until 2 sts rem. Change colors/yarns along this edge leaving 8-10 in. tails and knotting them tog for fringe. BO last 2 sts.

FRINGE: Lay Shawl out flat and see areas of fringe that need to be filled in (between where you changed yarns). Wind remaining or saved yarns around a book or other object to the length desired for fringe and cut one side of winding. Using a crochet hook, pull the center of each length through the bottom edge of Shawl and pull two ends through the loop and draw in snug. Scatter yarns along the edge evenly until you are satisfied with fringe. Trim any extra long ends. KS

Creating Engineered Sweater Designs

• By Susan Lazear

Dare to be different? Then why not design a sweater whose imagery fills the silhouette without a repeat or striped pattern? You will not see another sweater like it; this is guaranteed. Engineered designs are the type of designs that are planned to fill the space. Through the use of a few simple techniques and with the aid of a computer and software, you can create a unique design in a matter of minutes.

Ideation

In this phase of the design process, you look for images that inspire you to build an entire garment based on the graphic. You can employ a very simple basic design technique to help you in the process. Simply cut out a rectangle in the center of an 8½ x 11 inch piece of paper and move this over photographs, ads, and other artwork

Illustration 1: Panning Templates Over Imagery

you find in magazines. Better still, use a template of an existing sweater and pan this over artwork (Illustration 1). If you like, once you find an image that inspires you, trace the shape of the garment onto the artwork, and cut it out (Illustration 2). If you are not keen to cut into your art,

Illustration 2a: Coastal Cliffs

Illustration 2b: Cut-outs of Cliffscape

Illustration 3a: Desert

scape can become an exciting sweater with one water sleeve and one rock sleeve (Illustration 3). French fries or even radicchio can inspire you to create a food-inspired look (Illustrations 4 and 5). Flowers from graphic design books also then photocopy or scan the imagery that you see with the template sitting on top. You can actually plan all the pieces of the garment including the back and sleeves. An afternoon of "playing" will reward you with a multitude of sweater ideas. You can build a scrapbook of these various ideas.

The source of your imagery can vary. It can be anything, from food to landscapes to art. A desert land-make excellent design subjects. You can have the flower on the body and the stems and branches on the sleeves (Illustration 5a).

So, How Do I Get Imagery to Stitches?

Translating imagery to stitches is simplified through the use of your computer. You will need a grid design software program that allows you to import graphics and place them on the grid. In our example here, we will use Stitch Painter and the Full Color Import module.

First, you begin by getting some concept of what you want to place "where" in the body of the garment. Then, you must either create the rectangle of the sweater in stitches and rows, or the actual sweater, stitch by stitch. Garment Designer software can be used to build the actual shape of the sweater, or you can use a simple sweater shape, and subtract the neckline and armhole stitches later.

Illustration 5a: Flowers

Let's walk through an example of translating imagery to stitches. We will presume that we are working with a gauge of 5 stitches and 7 rows.

In Gorment Designer, create a sweater to the dimensions you want, and input the gauge (Illustration 6). Then, request the pixel-per-stitch graphics, and copy the front piece to the clipboard. Note via the knitting instructions how many stitches and rows the front pattern is. Our example sweater front is 110 stitches by 177 rows.

Move to Stitch Painter and set up the document size to be 110 x 177 (Set Document Size in the File menu).

Choose a color in the palette and then Select All (Edit menu), and Paste the garment from the clipboard into your document. You should have results as seen in Illustration 7.

If you create a Stencil, you will not need to worry about drawing on the white areas of the armhole and neckline. To do this, click on the white in the palette (use the Dropper tool to make sure you get the correct white). Then, go to the Palette menu and choose the Locked option. A padlock appears on your white. Then, turn "on" the Stencil by choosing Make Stencil from the Palette menu. At this point, you cannot draw on white, only the blue area of your sweater.

Move to your scanning software or a paint program where your imagery can be loaded. We are using Photoshop.

Select the portion of the image you want to paste into the sweater and copy this to the clipboard — Edit menu (Illustration 8). You will be asked how many colors to reduce the image to. We chose 6, even though we may knit the garment with less colors and may possibly use a variegated yarn to simulate some of the shading.

plot, and lay your knit on top of the pattern to help you decide when to change colors and when to curve the line more or less. Of course, you are always welcome to knit stitch for stitch; the choice is yours. You will have to decide how to make the front of the gorment transition nicely into the back. A simple trick is to reverse the imagery, thus allowing it to wrap its way around the body.

Designing engineered patterns is one of the more creative approaches to sweater design. As you've seen, employing some simple design exercises and the use of a computer can turn what may have been a daunting task into a relatively simple one. Have fun looking for design inspiration. It is everywhere. Once you've completed the design of the first garment you will be ready to charge into more. The only thing you must remember is that you need to take a break and knit a few of them. NS

Illustration 9 shows you the gridded sweater. You now have a great guide for building your sweater and if you wish, you can treat the graph as just that, a guide. Explore with yarns, build textures following the movement of the lines. If you hate counting stitches as you knit, you can print out the full scale pattern in Gorment Designer and trace the various design lines of the curves onto that. Then, when you knit, you can use the pattern as a tem-
